Grafting as a Sustainable Means for Securing Yield Stability and Quality in Vegetable Crops Marios Kyriacou, Giuseppe Colla, Youssef Rouphael, 2021-03-29 Vegetable growers around the world only collect, on average, half of the yield they would obtain under optimal conditions, known as yield potential. It is estimated that 60-70% of the yield gap is attributable to abiotic factors such as salinity, drought, suboptimal temperatures, nutritional deficiencies, flooding, waterlogging, heavy metals contamination, adverse soil pH and organic pollutants, while the remaining 30–40% is due to biotic factors, especially soilborne pathogens, foliar pathogens, arthropods and weeds. Under climate change forecasts, the pressure of biotic/abiotic stressors on yield is expected to rise and challenge further global food security. To meet global demand, several solutions have been proposed, focusing on the breeding of varieties with greater yield potential, but this one-size-fits-all solution leads to limited benefits. In order to overcome the current situation, grafting of elite scion varieties onto vigorous rootstock varieties has been suggested as one of the most promising drives towards further yield stability. Specifically, the implementation of suitable rootstock × scion × environment combinations in Solanaceous (tomato, eggplant, pepper) and Cucurbitaceous (melon, watermelon, melon) high-value crops represents an untapped opportunity to secure yield stability and reliability under biotic/abiotic stresses. This Special Issue invites Original Research, Technology Reports, Methods, Opinions, Perspectives, Invited Reviews and Mini Reviews dissecting grafting as a sustainable agro technology for enhancing tolerance to abiotic stresses and reducing disease damage. In addition, the following are of interest: potential contributions dealing with genetic resources for rootstock breeding, practices and technologies of rootstock breeding, and rootstock-scion signaling, as well as the physiological and molecular mechanisms underlying graft compatibility. In addition, the effect of grafting on vegetable quality, practical applications and nursery management of grafted seedlings and specialty crops (e.g. artichoke and bean) will be considered within the general scope of the Special Issue. We highly believe that this compilation of high standard scientific papers on the principles and practices of vegetable grafting will foster discussions within this important field.

Bioética para estudiantes y profesionales de ciencias de la salud Jorge Larracilla Alegre, María del Carmen Cruz Toledano, María de la Luz Casas Martínez, 2024-06-24 En las últimas décadas se ha visto un incremento de los problemas éticos, condicionado por una disminución de los valores humanos en la población en general y por el rápido incremento del desarrollo de la ciencia, en especial con logros tan importantes como la ingeniería genética, la biología molecular, la superación de las técnicas de producción, las pruebas de diagnóstico molecular, la creación de unidades coronarias, las investigaciones en el campo de la genética, el incremento en la esperanza de vida, etc., lo cual ha dado lugar a la creación de innumerables problemas éticos a los que se enfrenta el médico, que en la actualidad son de muy difícil solución. Como consecuencia de esto, resulta evidente la importancia que se le está dando en la actualidad al conocimiento y la aplicación de la ética en el campo de la salud. Se han generado múltiples publicaciones relacionadas con la ética, en las que se señalan los problemas que se presentan tanto en la edad pediátrica como en etapas posteriores. Es importante señalar que la frecuencia de estos problemas varía con la edad; unos sólo se presentan en el niño; otros son más frecuentes en el campo de la pediatría, como ocurre en la etapa antenatal y prenatal (embrión humano, aborto, etc.) o en la edad posnatal, y algunos más se observan en la etapa de la adultez o de la ancianidad. Con base en lo señalado, se justificó el desarrollo esta obra sobre los problemas éticos más frecuentes en la etapa senil, en la que se incluyen otros que también son frecuentes en el adulto, como ocurre con el ensañamiento terapéutico, los trasplantes de órganos y tejidos, las adicciones, etc.

Innovación docente y prácticas educativas para una educación de calidad. Carmen Romero García, 2022-07-21 La Agenda 2030 para el Desarrollo Sostenible tiene entre sus objetivos (ODS 4) alcanzar una educación de calidad. Para ello es fundamental incidir en la obtención de unos resultados de aprendizajes efectivos y de una formación en competencias que permita una adecuada progresión del alumnado en el sistema educativo, así como su integración en el mercado laboral. En este sentido, es esencial la formación del profesorado en prácticas educativas innovadoras mediante las cuales se consiga una formación del alumnado acorde a este objetivo.

Political Change in the Middle East and North Africa Inmaculada Szmolka, 2017-06-29 Taking a comparative approach, this book considers the ways in which political regimes have changed since the Arab Spring. It addresses a series of questions about political change in the context of the revolutions, upheavals and protests that have taken place in North Africa and the Arab Middle East since December 2010, and looks at the various processes have been underway in the region: democratisation (Tunisia), failed democratic transitions (Egypt, Libya and Yemen), political liberalisation (Morocco) and increased authoritarianism (Bahrain, Kuwait, Syria). In other countries, in contrast to these changes, the authoritarian regimes remain intact (Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Arab United Emirates).

Biocomplejidad Moisés Villegas, Lorena Caballero, Eduardo Vizcaya, 2019-06-01 Por cientos de años se han gastado ríos de tinta en escribir definiciones o caracterizaciones de lo que es la vida. No hay hasta hoy una definición ampliamente aceptada. Lo que sí comienza a ser aceptado, con ímpetu creciente, es un novedoso paradigma científico que propone que de componentes no vivos; pero propiamente dispuestos en un orden espacio-temporal preciso en el que existen entre ellos interacciones de naturaleza no-lineal, va a emerger colectivamente una propiedad común que es lo que conocemos como vida. Entonces lo vivo es emergente: pero no nos engañemos. Este paradigma tiene sus detractores que pugnarán por argumentar que las moléculas por separado podrían tener vida e inclusive personalidad propia, por ejemplo, un gen que es egoísta y que usa a su favor toda la maquinaria celular para su propósito que es prevalecer y perpetuarse. Este tipo de visión llamada comúnmente reduccionismo se enfrenta a otra visión moderna que es la de los sistemas complejos. Los sistemas complejos serían aquellos formados por múltiples componentes en interacción y en los cuales emergen propiedades en escalas de tiempo y espacio diferentes a la escala de los componentes. Las propiedades de dichos sistemas son lo que podríamos llamar complejidad y cuando los sistemas complejos son de naturaleza biológica, sus propiedades en conjunto suelen llamarse biocomplejidad. Por ello, la biocomplejidad es el estudio de interacciones de componentes, ya sean genes, proteínas, máquinas moleculares, células con otras células, tejidos con otros tejidos, órganos con otros órganos, individuos con otros individuos e interacciones entre especies y medioambiente en ensambles ecológicos. Se trata así de jerarquías de interacciones modulares a las cuales, además debemos agregar la conjetura de que operan en estado crítico, es decir, en las cercanías de las transiciones de fase orden-desorden. El lector tiene frente a sí, un libro cuyos autores exploran este nuevo paradigma biológico con la loable esperanza de brindar un texto ameno, con autoridad y generoso por tratarse de un texto gratuito en acceso abierto.
