Where's My Stuff? Tim C. Star, 2017-11-17 Esther Hicks and her late husband Jerry are the modern-day gurus at the top of the mountain in the personal prosperity arena. Esther is famous for her work as a channel for the non-physical entity group called Abraham, preaching an unwavering mantra of reach for the next better-feeling thought as the way to happiness. Author, Tim C. Star, has studied the Abraham-Hicks materials from the standpoint of a hopeful skeptic, looking for logical arguments for its efficacy as well as for holes in its theory. Inside, you'll find his arguments for and against what Abraham has to say. It's a left-brained, analytical look at a right-brained, intuitive concept. Written with humor and insight, each page serves up something to think about. Sometimes expanding on the quotes that inspired him to write, and sometimes offering his own translations, the author offers his personal thoughts and feelings about the Law of Attraction.

The Delight Makers Catherine L. Albanese, 2023-01-17 Can you draw a clear line through American history from the Puritans to the Nones of today? On the surface, there is not much connective tissue between the former, who often serve as shorthand for a persistent religious fanaticism in the United States, and the almost one quarter of the population who now regularly check the None or None of the above box when responding to surveys of religious preference. But instead of seeing a disconnect between these two groups separated by time, historian Catherine Albanese insists there is a deep connection that spans the centuries. With a targeted romp through American history from the seventeenth century to the present, Albanese ties together these seemingly disparate groups through a shared and distinctively American preoccupation with delight and desire. Albanese begins our journey with the role of delight and desire in the brand of Calvinism championed by renowned Puritan minister Cotton Mather and later Jonathan Edwards. She then traces the development of these themes up through the present, treating the reader to revelatory readings of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Horace Bushnell, Andrew Jackson Davis, William James, Emma Curtis Hopkins, Elizabeth Towne, and others, revealing the contours of an evolving theology of desire. The result is an original and entertaining take on an underexamined through line in American history--
