Technology Acceptance Model (TAM) is a widely used model in the field of MIS. It was developed by Davis in 1989. The model consists of two main constructs: perceived ease of use (PEOU) and perceived usefulness (PU). PEOU is defined as the degree to which a person believes that using a technology will be free of effort. PU is defined as the degree to which a person believes that using a technology will enhance their job performance. The model also includes two external variables: external variables (EV) and moderating variables (MV). EVs are factors that influence the relationship between PEOU and PU. MVs are factors that moderate the relationship between PEOU and PU. The model is represented by the following equation: $PU = f(PEOU, EV, MV)$. The model has been extensively tested and validated in various contexts, including e-commerce, education, and healthcare. It is a valuable tool for researchers and practitioners alike. Peter Tam - Jan 30, 2025 · Peter Tam TAM (Technology Acceptance Model) is a widely used model in the field of MIS.
